Brian Snyders, DO and founder of Prairie Family Medicine feels confident about choosing Praxis Health. "My full career as a physician has been in North Idaho and handing our practice, patients and staff off to the next generation of ownership was a decision not taken lightly. Praxis Health is fully committed to maintaining the culture of our office and commitment to all involved, which was the primary consideration in selecting our successor."

Dan McCarthy, Praxis Health's CEO is very enthusiastic about the new acquisition. "Prairie Family Medicine and their reputation as a high performing primary care group is an excellent foundation for growth in the Coeur d'Alene market. We aspire to augment their personal approach to care through expansion and earning trust with the CdA community that we can continue to offer a delightful care experience."

We believe that excellent health care begins with a meaningful, long-lasting relationship between a patient and their care team. We achieve this by compassionately listening to our patient's personal needs, wants, desires, and goals so that the patient and their family are central to the care and medical process. This can mean putting the patient's needs, as they define them, at the forefront of the services we provide. We are truly honored by the people who choose us as partners on their health care journey.

Praxis Health is rooted in our local communities and our goal is to remain connected to the people and places as we continue to grow. We promise to continue to deliver outstanding, personalized care to all of our patients while honoring the needs of each community that we serve.
